Noted couple parting with expansive estate

A little more than a decade after they sold the Mayflower Inn & Spa, prized country inn attraction to the stars, influential couple Robert and Adriana Mnuchin have listed their extremely expansive 1994 Georgian Colonial estate. The Mnuchin family, known for their interest in multimillion-dollar artwork and investment banking, bought the destination Mayflower resort more than two decades ago, but in 2007 sold it to American Property Hospitality Management. Since that time, the Mayflower, which quietly hosts guests such as Chelsea Clinton or Robert DeNiro, has switched ownership at least three times. So in the hilly town of Washington,

The house was built with all of the finest amenities, including a library with fireplace.

CT, itself one of a myriad hidden gems in the bucolic Litchfield Hills, whenever the name Mnuchin is spoken, it is one that echoes. However, even among those less plugged into the upperclass lifestyles that permeate the northwest corner of Connecticut, the name Mnuchin might still ring a bell, as Steven Mnuchin, the son of Robert and Adriana, is the current United States Secretary of the Treasury. The gated estate on 290 acres, which is now for sale, must be approached via a mile-long driveway. The main manse features a large gallery-style foyer for art, a solarium/dining room, a living room and library each with a fireplace; a gym, an elevator, and a massive veranda. Aside from the swimming pools and ponds and gardens and orchards and tennis courts, the estate also includes a two-bedroom guesthouse, a four-bedroom caretaker's house, and a three-car detached garage. "This is one of the finest and most exciting properties in Washington," said Carolyn Klemm, listing agent for the estate. It is definitely up there.
